International Buffet (with 1 user ID)

$12,735

Content – access to all data contained in the database:

The International Data Buffet is comprised of two types of data: agency data and country source data. The OECD (Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development) the UN, IMF and EuroStat are agencies whose data is available in the Buffet. By using agency data, it is easier to cross-compare countries and concepts. For those who are interested in the real detail, the International Buffet includes data direct from the countries. For example, the Reserve Bank of Australia, FIEL in Argentina, Central Statistics Office of Ireland, and the Bank of Korea are all providers of data for the International Buffet. There are concepts available for all major sectors of the economy: National Accounts, Foreign Trade, Money and Banking, Industrial Production, just to name a few. Also, given how important market information has become, the International Data Buffet contains daily and weekly data for stock markets and interest rates by country. As we have done with the domestic Data Buffet, the International Data Buffet will continue to grow as clients and Economy.com staff identify additional data needs.

Subscriber – the institution is the subscriber. One ID is provided with the subscription. With the permission of the subscriber additional users who want their own ID can purchase an ID for $1,000.

Regional Financial Review (published monthly)

$8,815

Content - The Review covers the U.S. economy in all its dimensions: U.S. Macro; U.S. Financial; Regional; and Industry. The Review offers in-depth analysis of topical issues highly relevant to policy planning. Recent analysis pieces include Infrastructure's Impact; Fiscal Policy Choices; Outlook for Household Credit Conditions; The Low Income Recession; and In the Driver's Seat, an examination of the outlook for vehicle sales.

The Review also offers analysis and an extensive array on statistics on state and metropolitan area growth trends. One of the Review's regular features is an extensive discussion of major developments and changes to short-term forecasts for states and metropolitan areas. This is supplemented by over 60 tables offering historical statistics for states and metro areas on an array of subjects, including employment and income; industrial activity; demographics; housing; consumption and confidence; non-residential construction; credit quality; and banking. Each table is available for downloading in Excel or PDF format from the Economy.com web site. The pieces include Retirement Migration, The Lender of First and Last Resort, and Regional Leading Economic Indicators.

The Review contains Economy.com's full U.S. Macro and financial forecasts and key forecast series for all states and the top fifty metropolitan areas. Forecast assumptions are noted in detail each month. The Review is more than just a print product: subscribers can call Economy.com's professional economics staff to discuss current or anticipated trends in the U.S. economy, to inquire about risks to specific industries or regions, or to discuss any germane matter about the economy or statistics for which we may offer assistance.

(e) Acknowledge of the Statement of Work

Most of the proposed services are in response to Lot 1 – Electronic Databases / Publications. However, most, but not all, Electronic Series included in Lot 1 can also be purchased in hard copy. Most clients prefer a combination of electronic and hard copy deliveries. Web IDs and hard copies can be mixed as long as the total IDs and hard copies is below the number included as a part of the subscription. The initialed acknowledgement is included in the certifications.

(f) Acknowledgement of the Deliveries or Performance requirements

The initialed acknowledgement is included with the certifications.

(g) Contract Administration Data

Modification Instructions – Economy.com has added services every year and expects to develop new services (either databases or electronic series) during the period covered by this contract. Whenever possible, we will submit the new services for approval to modify the Basis Ordering Agreement.

Constant Pricing and Discount – Economy.com will maintain constant pricing for each fiscal year. Since commercial prices have been increasing, that implies that the discounts may increase during the fiscal year.

Service Options – Economy.com intends to make services available under either a “Transfer Pay” or “Direct Pay” options.

Usage Detail – Economy.com subscription services provide unlimited use. Consequently, we have not offered a monthly usage reporting system suitable for client use. We request a temporary waiver for monthly usage reporting for all 1011 and 1101 services. However, we appreciate members need to analyze usage pattern. Therefore, we propose that within two months of usage exceeding $100,000 we will offer usage reports to FEDLINK clients. We prefer providing the reports via file transfer, e-mail. The initial reports will capture previous usage and then be available with monthly. All services that involve delivery under an arrangement other than unlimited usage, such as prepaid access to www.economy.com, have real time usage reporting built in.

The initialed acknowledgement is included with the certifications.

(h) Special Contract Requirements

Report – Economy.com will develop a computerized report to provide the information shown in the FEDLINK Quarterly Summary Report Form.
